The Way Is Hard . . .

Even though our forefathers began with little, so strong was their character that they strived valiantly against the rigors of New England winters, overcame the hostile Indians, and struggled through constant hardships for food and clothing until they had succeeded in establishing permanent settlements.

With the development of agriculture and the growth of industry, the need of expansion became evident. Then it was that the more adventurous began the journey westward, building up one area after another. Were it not for their great courage and indomitable spirit in combating the many dangers and hostile enemy attacks, failure might easily have been the result.

The way was far from easy, but the result — the setting up of our United States with the highest of ideals, a democratic form of government, the many industries, and high type citizens — renders ample proof that the struggle has proved adequately effective.

It can be truly said when we consider the founding and growth of our country:

"THE WAY IS HARD, BUT THE REWARD IS GREAT"

Science and Humanity

Michael E. Austin

ALTHOUGH MEN from the earliest times have attempted to develop what might now be termed science, it was not until the Scientific Revolution of the sixteenth century that science, as we understand it today, began to evolve. Among the foremost of the early pioneers we find men like Newton, Copernicus, and Kepler, each concentrating in the field of his own particular interest. These, like scientists of all generations, are found to have striven first for practical and immediate goals. Newton, for example, turned to astronomy because it was consistent with the need for solving many navigational problems of his era; similarly, we find that Faraday strove to uncover the relationship between electricity and magnetism, since it was this question upon which scientific work of his day was centered. Thus we note how science and the scientist have long been devoted to the furtherance and advancement of culture; likewise, how the cultural needs of the people, in turn, direct the progress of science.

This inter-relationship between the cultural needs of the people and science has never been more pronounced than in our own times. Today we are able to look back upon the past half-century and note the illimitable progress wrought by man in fostering and developing this relationship.

The fulfillment of one of man's most ancient desires occurred with the coming of the airplane. Although beginning modestly with the Wright Brothers' famous flight at Kitty Hawk, aviation has grown to awesome dimensions, expanding in accordance with the needs of the world.

The first demands of the airplane came at the outset of World War I, when it became evident that it would prove potent as an offensive weapon. Engineers and physicists have worked long and hard, developing newer and better aircraft by improving former designs. Through the years, aviation has advanced into jet aircraft, complying with the ever increasing public demands for speed and efficiency in our modern times. Recent developments include such planes as the Navy's Pogo, capable of taking off and landing vertically. Swiveling wings and propellers are playing an ever important role in the search which scientists hope will eventually eliminate the need for cumbersome mile-long runways. Perhaps the ideal or ultimate of this type of jet aircraft will find itself in the "flying wing" or Delta type planes, which will one day be able to land as the helicopter does, without sacrificing speed or efficiency.

Aviation, however, is but one of many phases of recent scientific developments. Advances in radar, communication, radio, television, and, of course, atomic energy are among those fields which affect the public daily. Perhaps the field of atomic energy receives the least apparent public approval or appreciative understanding. Few people realize that this, too, like all other scientific advances, came about in direct response to the needs and requirements of an ever-growing world: a world whose resources are gradually shrinking; a world dependent upon unpredictable power sources; in all, a world in dire need of newer and more plentiful sources of power with which to maintain and further the growth of industry and commerce, insuring nations of security and prosperity.

Thus we see that men like Einstein and Vannevar Bush were far from being mad scientists, but rather they played the more prominent roles in the unleashing of the atom and its power. We must accept, therefore, the fact that the atomic bomb was simply the unfortunate, but perhaps unavoidable, result of progress. With the proper understanding, mankind may soon be rid of the threat of the atom, and turn all its vast potential energy to peaceful purposes.

The scientist's dependency, even today, upon his environment for ideas and inspirations, and the advancement of civilization, in turn dependent upon science for its own progress, can be traced with far more vividness than is given here. Considering the past, we may speculate upon the future and draw the conclusion that we need neither fear nor despise the aims and goals of science today.

We must realize that science will continue to serve mankind only as long as we, living as we do in a free democracy, continue to pursue the high ideals for which our forefathers fought and died in order to preserve the God-given rights and freedoms of mankind

AUTOMATION IN BUSINESS

Jo Anne DeGust

WITH THE modern concept of automation, undoubtedly an industrial revolution is present in the business world today, promising more leisure, relief from menial tasks, and an assured prosperity through higher productivity.

This era has resulted after the introduction of modern automatic machinery that does a man's work, greatly increases production, and facilitates office detail and computing. Companies, once swamped by office work, have installed new devices such as the I.B.M. electric typewriter, "magic" electronic machines. and "robot" computers of many different types and sizes. One of the first big computers, the General Electric UNIVAC, has proved its importance in figuring the payroll and in printing checks; another type of equal importance is used in the Commonwealth Edison Company of Chicago doing the work of two hundred clerks and saving $750,000 a year. At a conference in Los Angeles, a senior member of a large accounting firm remarked, "Computers are the outstanding development of technology and are positively vital to management. Their importance can be compared to that of the bulldozer in the construction industry."

A question most commonly asked today is whether, with the introduction of the automatic machines, the average worker will suffer because of lack of positions. A vice-president of Ford Motor Company, Del S. Harder, claims that the outcome will furnish more jobs, create more products at less cost, and increase the ability of the people to consume. He believes that the automatic machine is the key to less human effort in the future and will improve the present standard of living. Expanding business is affording opportunities for new positions every day; for instance, the high-speed electronic computer programmers, analysts, and operators, as well as numerous clerks to compile the information. This is an age of specialization when concentration will be placed on the worker who is skilled in secretarial training, business administration, or mechanical technology.

It has been said that the real office revolution is not a machine revolution at all; it is a systems revolution. Now it seems that much of the mundane side of the work can be accomplished by machines in a comparatively short time. As was remarked in "Office Executive," "Today we must spend more time teaching the clerical help to be technicians, rather than bookkeepers or accountants."

We have been assured that the office is not going to vanish in the future, only certain phases of it. For a glimpse of what office life may be in a few years, let us consider the new headquarters of the Standard-Vacuum Oil Company in White Plains, New York. At the push of a button, walls move, curtains shift, and maps or motion-picture projectors appear. From any one of the 245 remote dictation-transcription stations in the building, a person can pick up a telephone-like instrument to dictate a letter to a central transcription room where the material is transcribed and then returned to the dictator.

Another feature is the fully automatic pneumatic-tube system with one centralized filing office, by which objects up to seven pounds in weight can be sent to any part of the building, within a matter of seconds, merely by putting them into a plastic container at a dispatching station and setting the dial to indicate destination. With such ultra-modern features, it is easy to understand the remark made in the magazine, "Today's Secretary," "The secretaries in the Standard-Vacuum Oil Company are highly skilled and have a vast knowledge of the business. They are given time to develop and do things on their own; in reality, they are administrative assistants to the leading executives of the company."

Despite all these modern inventions, from an electric pencil sharpener to the high-speed electronic computer, the fact remains that business graduates are still in great demand. We need not fear automation, but face it with the same confidence that the late Philip Murray expressed when he said:

"I do not know of a single instance in which a technological gain has taken place in the United States of America that has thrown people out of work. The industrial revolution that has been taking place in business during the past twenty-five years has brought into the employment field an additional twenty million people."

EDUCATION—TODAY

Pauline Mauro

MANY CHANGES in the program of modern education involving an entirely different set-up have been evident in the past years. Slowly but definitely a new system, usually described as progressive, has advanced into the foreground. This type of education, difficult to define, has developed continuously, hence involving varied and numerous changes.

Science, by continual research, affords the latest in progress in many fields and contributes an unusual amount to this type of education. The purpose today is to cover just as much information as possible. Dr. Carleton Washburne, who has been active in the National Society for the Study of Education, explains progressive education as simply the on-going effort to apply the increasing findings of science toward helping children to grow up in accordance with the democratic ideal, both as an individual and as a responsible participant, in a democratic society.

To prepare future participants, many modern schools take the students out into the community to observe and become aware of the real meaning of culture. Audio visual aids, such as motion pictures, film strips, radio, and television are also used extensively to acquaint them with the world of today. John Dewey, commonly known as the father of modern progressive education, once said that the school itself should be made a genuine form of active community life, instead of a place set apart in which to learn lessons. Since his death the society set up in his honor has done much to analyze the needs of American Youth and to meet the changes of modern times.

In spite of the many accomplishments and advantages of present-day education, some critics still feel that the fundamentals are being neglected. However, this opinion has been proved inaccurate by the Progressive Education Association who, after great study and experiment, has shown that the so-called "traditional" type still holds an equally important place with the progressive in our educational system.

Although the three R's are taught in a different manner today, Dr. Benjamin Fine, a former winner of the Pulitzer Prize, assures the public that the basic subjects still have their share of attention. He continues to say that many schools have introduced a method of combining subjects, called a "core" program, which is a combination of such courses as English and history, or literature and world affairs. However, these methods have not been brought about because of some school superintendent, but they were tested and proved to be worthwhile before being introduced into the classroom.

Williard E. Givens, the Executive Secretary of the National Education Association of the United States, asserts that education today is based on the belief that nothing is of greater importance than the child. The modern school is provided to satisfy the needs of each in ways that will not hinder the progress of others in the class. Subjects are presented in an informal, friendly way with a self-expression that acts as a stimulus and contributes greatly to the understanding. The teacher shows a warm sympathic interest in all pupils and has respect for individual differences. Effort is constantly being made to conserve and develop all talents for both the gifted and the retarded.

Here in our country, it has ever been realized that it is only through education that the American heritage will remain meaningful and that it will be preserved for future generations.

Youth Builds for Tomorrow

STUDENT COUNCIL

► Our Student Council has sponsored many record hops, contests, and various assemblies throughout the year. Besides having taken an active part in school affairs, many members of the council have also represented Weymouth at state conventions, and participated in several inter-school discussions. Led by their officers, Charles Hurd, President; Peter Stilphen, Vice-President; Barbara Brittain and Charlene Dibble, Secretaries; and Robert Reeves, Treasurer; the council is to be congratulated for fine work.

FOOTBALL

► Weymouth High was certainly proud of our Class A Championship football team this year, under the direction of Coach Fisher, with Co-captains Peter Stilphen and Otis Godfrey.

Opposing the most difficult teams in the state, the team readily demonstrated its prowess, as sportsmanship and teamwork reigned throughout the season even under the most trying conditions.

Keeping the tradition of the school, the boys on the team each received the white sweater signifying an undefeated team. Each member should be congratulated for a job well done!

► Finishing undefeated in nine games, Weymouth managed to upset successfully the following teams . . .

Weymouth	27 — Brookline	0
Weymouth	14 — Quincy	6
Weymouth	20 — Malden	7
Weymouth	24 — Medford	6
Weymouth	33 — Chelsea	0
Weymouth	54 — Everett	14
Weymouth	34 — Arlington	14
Weymouth	25 — Somerville	0
Weymouth	48 — Brockton	6

CHEERLEADERS AND

DRUM MAJORETTES

► Undoubtedly, the most spirited groups in our school are the Cheerleaders and Drum Majorettes. Leading the bandwagon of Weymouth's Class A Football Champs, they certainly showed the enthusiasm and high spirit which have always characterized Weymouth's fine sense of sportsmanship. The Cheerleaders, led by head cheerleader, Judith Pitts, include: W — Beverly Stevens; E — Connie Santacroce; Y — Sandra McCusker; M — Barbara Brittain; O — Carol Reynolds; U — Elaine Lewis; T — Charlene Dibble; H — Patsy McMorrrow; with Kathleen Grant, Beverly Moran, Myrna DiBona, and Roberta Nicholson as subs. The Drum Majorettes, Mary Martin, Carol Logan, Martha Ferguson, and Jane Sullivan, were led by Cynthia Payne.

BASKETBALL

► Our basketball team, composed mainly of underclassmen, did not have too successful a season, winning only five of their games, although fine sportsmanship and team spirit were present at all times. Coach Dick Whitmore bids farewell to his two senior starters, Joe Kelly and Doug McLeod, but the team, retaining many valuable players among the juniors, looks forward to next year.

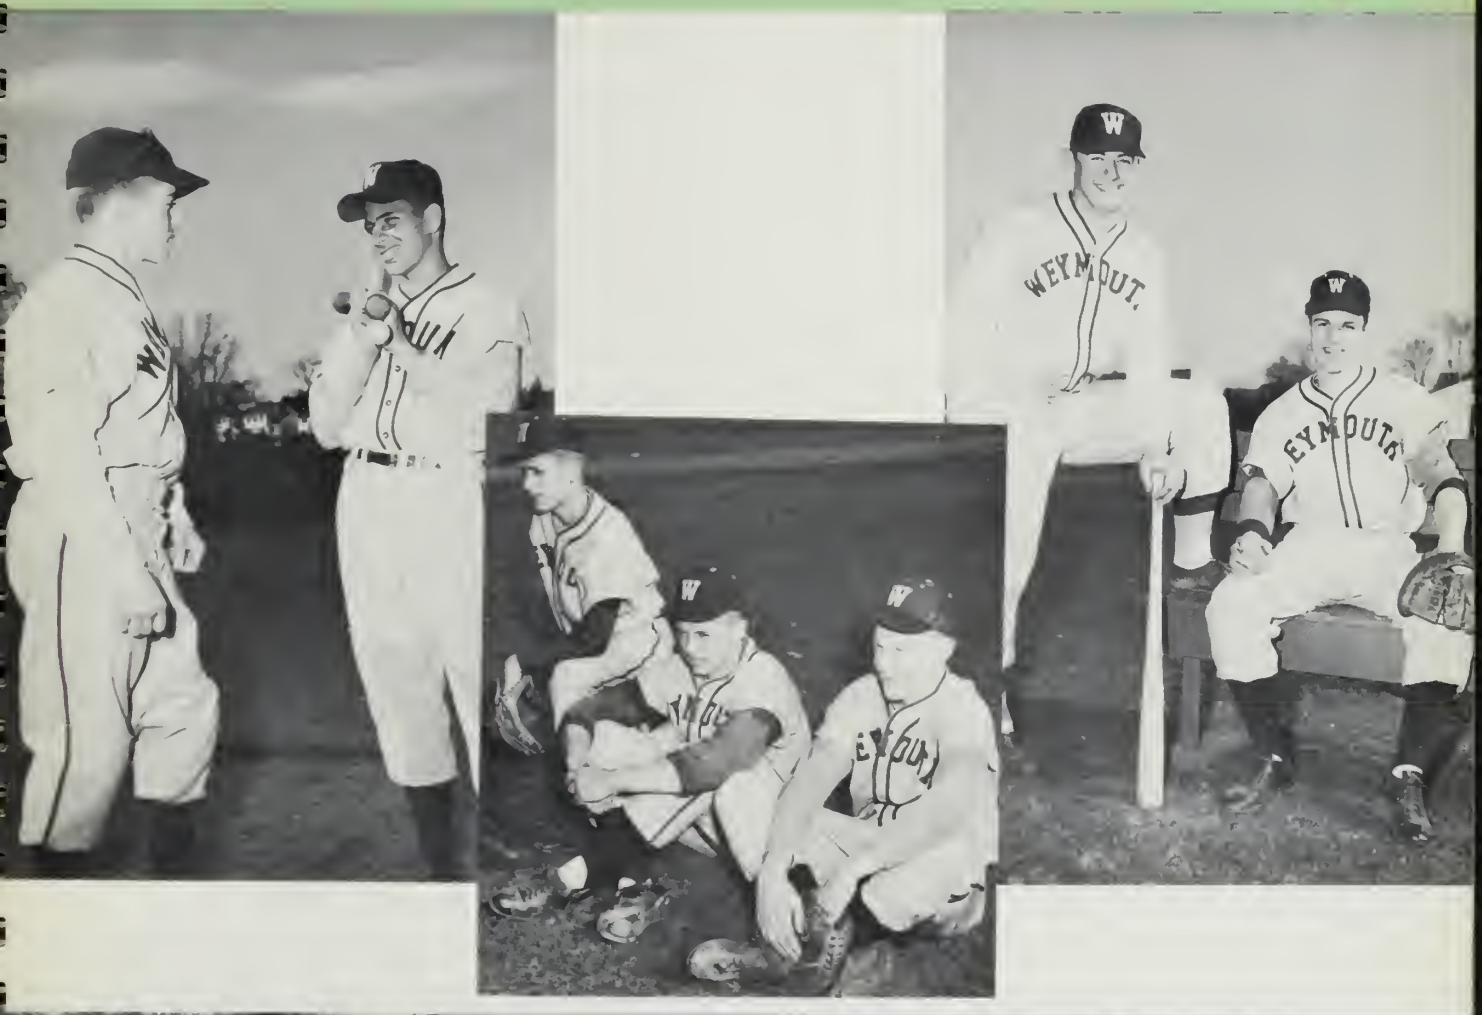
TRACK AND

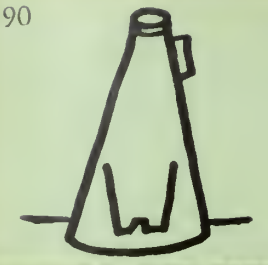
► Guided by Coaches Oral Page and Malcolm Pratt, our track and cross country teams have enjoyed another series of successful seasons, with the track team winning most of its dual meets and the cross country squad losing but one of its contests. Paul and Tom Kuja are the two seniors leaving the cross country squad this year, although the track team will be losing many valuable men.

CROSS COUNTRY

BASEBALL

► As in the past, Weymouth's baseball team has experienced another fine series of games, opposing several formidable opponents who provided a real test of the boys' skills, both on the field and at the plate. The boys, directed by Coach John Fisher, are to be congratulated for another fine season!





SPORTS RALLIES

► For the first time, the Yearbook contains a page for Sports Rallies, including shorts from this year's athletic banquet as well as the popular "Toast of Maroon Town" assembly. The staff feels that these events contribute vastly to Weymouth's athletic successes, and have been as integral in their importance to Weymouth's spirit and enthusiasm as the sports contests themselves.

GIRLS' SPORTS

► After school at almost any time of the year, you will find some phase of girls' sports taking place, either in the gym, on Libby Field, or on the tennis courts. Field hockey in the fall is quickly followed by volleyball, basketball, badminton, softball, and tennis.

Under the direction of Miss Arnold and Miss Sharkey, there is always some spirited contest being carried out for top honors in one of these tournaments.

ORATORICAL

► For the second year in a row the President of our Student Council has won the American Legion Oratorical contest. This year's winner, Charles Hurd, entered into the last lap of competition against Barbara Brittain, John DeCoste, and Linda Tower. The subject of the addresses was based upon the United States Constitution; all of the entrants, assisted by Mr. Longridge and Mr. Kearns, gave interesting and informative speeches.

HYVOC GAZETTE

► The W. H. S. newspaper, the "Hyvoc Gazette," has had its second year of publication, with Rosalind Crocker, Editor-in-Chief; Michael Austin, Business Manager; and Mr. Steele, Faculty Adviser.

The paper had many successful issues, despite the many problems which were encountered by the staff. To all the editors and members of the various staffs, we should like to extend our sincerest thanks for giving Weymouth High School a current publication.

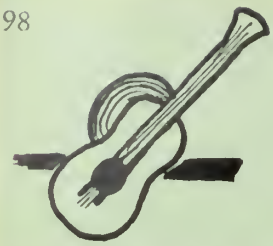
REFLECTOR

► The Reflector, the oldest of the school's publications, had another very successful year, under the direction of Anna Trufant, Editor-in-Chief; Charlotte Cole, Art Editor, and Janet Bryson, Business Manager. Once again the students at Weymouth High were able to see their stories, poems, and puzzles published in a fine magazine. Congratulations once again to the entire staff of the publication for a job well done!

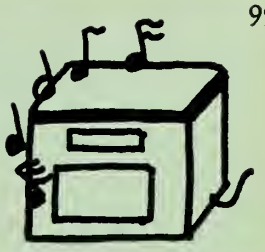
YEARBOOK

► The Yearbook staff, with Michael Austin as Editor-in-Chief; Joan Hamblin, Art Editor; Beverly Barton, Assistant Editor; and Priscilla Nickerson, Assistant Art Editor; has worked hard, in co-operation with our faculty advisers and members of the student body, attempting to maintain Weymouth's fine record of Yearbook quality and progress.

The staff would like to thank, once again, all those whose efforts and guidance have enabled us to produce this book.



BAND, CHORUS,



AND ORCHESTRA

► This past year the band was under the direction of Mr. Richard Haapoaja, aided by Mr. Russell Jack during the football season who instructed the band in marching according to the University of Michigan style. The band was seen at the football games and concerts, and took part in the various parades and festivals, along with our other two musical groups, the orchestra and chorus, both conducted by Mr. Jack.

Several from the three groups attended the All State and New England Festivals, as well as the Southeastern Massachusetts Festival held here at Weymouth.

MATH CLUB

► One of the most successful clubs of the past year is also the newest. The Math Club, organized by Mr. Raymond, and under the direction of Gordon Walker, President; Wesley Grace, Vice-President; and Rosalind Crocker, Secretary; has held regular meetings every other week throughout the entire year. Each meeting was pre-planned by the members of the club and was presented in such a way that it was interesting to all. A discussion of adding machines, calculators, sextants, and telescopes, together with games and puzzles, contributed to a most successful year for the club.

KEY CLUB

► The Key Club, sponsored by the Kiwanis Club, is the only school group to present scholarships to deserving seniors. With John DeCoste, President; Theodore Allen, Vice-President; and Michael Austin, Treasurer; the club has organized many fund raising activities to fulfill its active community service programs.

FUTURE NURSES

► As in the past, the Future Nurses' Club has had a very active year, with Miss Stockwell, Faculty Adviser, directing the various activities, which featured a Christmas party, trips to nearby hospitals, and guest speakers.

Among the many speakers at the meetings were a student nurse, a hair stylist, and a guidance counselor who all presented different phases of a nursing career.

FUTURE TEACHERS

► A second new organization this year was the Future Teachers' Club, carried on under the leadership of Lois Daniels, President, with Miss Pearson as faculty adviser. Several speakers addressed the club, chief among them Mr. Brown, a well-known teacher who retired from Weymouth High last June, and in whose honor the club has been named.

One of the more interesting activities of the club was the so-called "Observance Day," when many seniors were given the opportunity to visit various schools in the town and observe the work being done by many outstanding teachers in both the elementary and junior high schools.

LIBRARY CLUB

► The members of the Library Club, guided by Miss Gloster, work daily charging and shelving books, as well as setting up many interesting arrangements on bulletin boards and exhibits around the library. Of course, books often require repair, and once again the club comes to the rescue, mending torn pages and covers, in order that the student body might have the books available for reference and research. We should like to thank all of those concerned for their interest and help throughout the year.

SPANISH CLUB

► The officers of the Spanish Club this past year were: Edna Green, President; Diana Alemian, Vice-President; Judy Curtis, Secretary; Joan Carroll, Treasurer; Pauline Mauro, Program Chairman; and Judith Fortier, Refreshment Chairman. The faculty advisers were Mrs. Derry and Mrs. Bedell. Among the many activities of the club were skits by the members, a movie on Mexico, "I've Got a Secret," and a Christmas party with Spanish customs and refreshments; in all, another successful year!

LAB ASSISTANTS

► Our Lab Assistants, interested in physics or chemistry, aid the science teachers in keeping the laboratories clean and in good order, eliminating a good deal of confusion and helping the science classes to operate more smoothly. For their assistance throughout the year, the student body would like to thank these persons, who may one day make use of their training and experience in their future occupations.

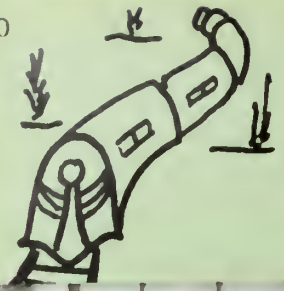
A. V. CLUB

➤ A few notable changes occurred this past year in the ranks of the Audio-Visual Club, better known as the A.V. Club. The major difference, of course, was that girls were admitted for the first time! Although it took training, they are now most proficient at operating the various projectors and other equipment of the club.

The assistance given classes through films and records was one of the more important phases of the club's activities, with Theodore Allen, Manager; David Mahn and Roy Eaton as Assistant Managers. Each co-operated with the members of the club in making this year a highly beneficial one for all.

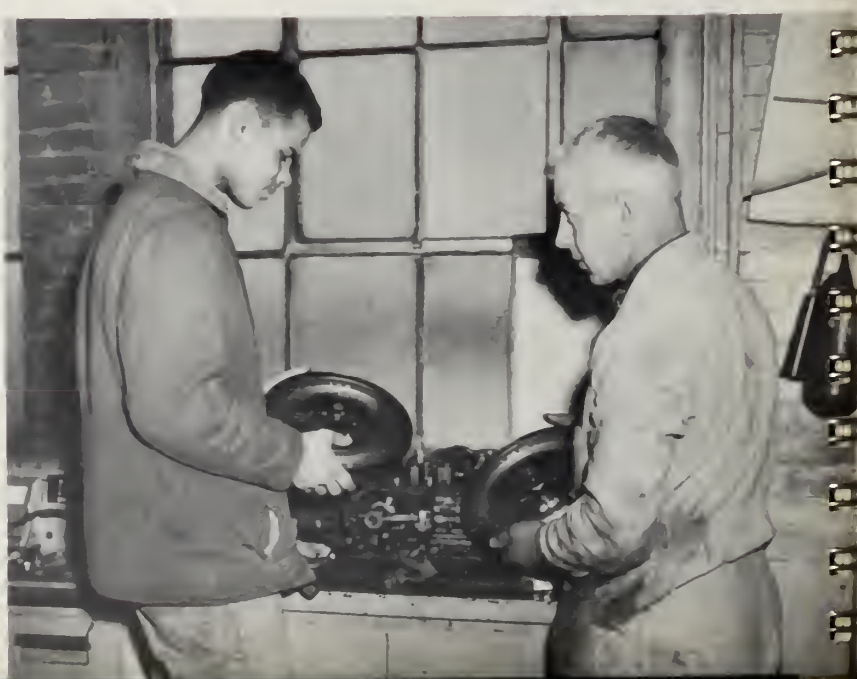
SENIOR PLAY

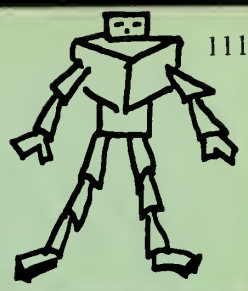
► "Buy Jupiter!", our senior class play, was a huge success, as the two main leads, Connie Santacroce and Bob West, led the large cast through two evenings of a comedy set to music. The theme of the play, the difficulties arising from a "talking" rabbit, Jupiter, in the life of the toy-buyer, Kay Linsey, portrayed by Carol Reynolds, was skillfully blended into three acts by William Longridge, director.



AUTO MECHANICS

► A source of future mechanics from Weymouth lies in our Automobile Shop, as boys are instructed in all the phases of automotive repair, keeping up with the latest developments and improvements in engine design. Because of the high quality of work maintained by the boys under their advisers, the shop is patronized by many, who bring their cars here for service.

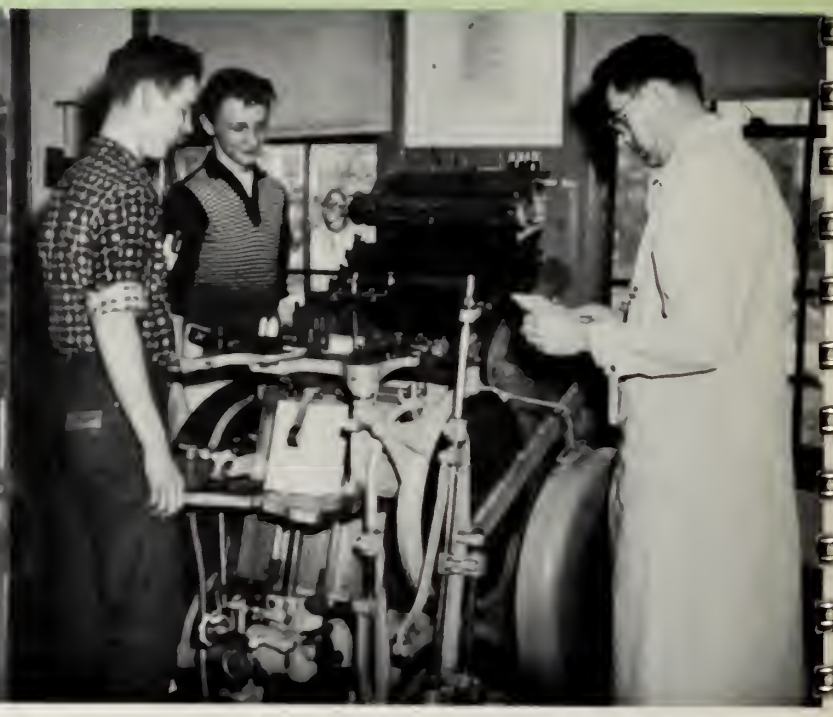




SHEET METAL

► Boys of the Sheet Metal course have been busily engaged throughout the year in the construction and installation of the heating system in the new house. Thus, they, too, experience all of the more vital phases of their future employment, in order that they may one day become successful skilled workers in the sheet metal industries.

PRINTING



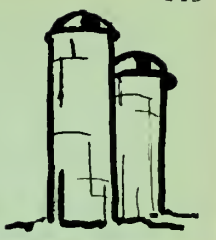
► Prehaps the most active and important of the shops is the Printing Deparment, where boys gain valuable experience at operating the linotype, ludow, presses, and the other machines. Besides having the responsibility of printing both the Reflector and much of the Yearbook, the Print Shop also manages to work for the superintendent's office, thus maintaining an active schedule throughout the year.

CABINETMAKING

► Cabinetmaking, as in the past, has once again had a busy year, furnishing doors and tables for our cafeteria, making fine furniture for the new house which the departments of the vocational school are constructing, and fulfilling other orders of many types, all providing the boys with the necessary backgrounds to enter their chosen careers.

CARPENTRY

► Carpentry, as the name implies, involves construction, and we find that the boys of Weymouth Vocational School miss not even the smallest part of their necessary training, as they complete an entire house each year, from the foundation up! Hence, by giving each boy the opportunity to participate in all phases of construction, the course has proved a very successful one.



AGRICULTURE

► The Agricultural Department offers another of the outstanding courses at Weymouth High. The boys in the course have been fortunate in having had the opportunity to gain experience at the Norfolk County Agriculture School, of which Weymouth is a branch. Guided by their advisers, the boys study plant and livestock care to prepare them for the summer jobs in nurseries and farms throughout New England.

Senior Class Prayer

DEAR LORD in Heaven above, we bring our thanks to You on this, our graduation day. We are fully aware, O Lord, that it is only through Your help that we have reached our goal at Weymouth High School. Humbly we thank You for enabling us to accomplish our desires.

Your goodness to us has been constant and generous. You have comforted us during our most trying hours. You have given us the courage to carry on in spite of obstacles. It has been Your love for us that has made us strong and sturdy enough to gain our objectives.

Therefore, it is with gratitude and love in our hearts that we stand here today at the gateway to life, fully prepared and ready to meet any future challenges. We ask only that You continue to offer us Your divine guidance for the rest of our lives on this earth.

Please God, do not let there be any troubled hearts here today Remove any grudges or feelings of unfriendliness from the hearts of all of us. Permit that each one of us may feel he has done his part to bring honor to Weymouth High School. Forgive us for any errors we have made, and make our graduation day a happy one, to be remembered for many years to come.

Grant that every student graduating may find the work in life which You have given him the talent to do. May each of us always walk before You with pure hearts, clear consciences and enlightened minds. May our primary purpose in life be to please You, dear God, and to make You proud of us, as we are proud to have You as our Father in Heaven.

This we ask in Thy Name

Amen
